80c WHEAT COMING IN

The Price Not Tempting But There's Is Loss In Holding.

FIRST PRICE GENERALLY BEST

Large Percentage of Crops Threshed and Ready For Market.

Although great rows of wagons cannot be seen waiting for unloading at the elevators as last year, yet farmers are beginning to bring in their new crops of wheat, even though 80 cent per bushel is the ruling price.

Farmers have different ideas as to when is the best time to sell. Some persist, when there is reasonable probability of wheat advancing only 10 cents, to hold for the advance. Others say that the safest plan is to sell when the price is established. They say that the loss by shrinkage and insurance will eat up the 10 cent advance.

The threshing season this year has been unusually favorable and a large percentage of the crop is now ready for the market. If the three weeks of rainy weather that nearly always comes just after the harvest had prevailed this year, then the farmers would have cause for grumbling at 80 cents for their crops, for the loss by sprouting and otherwise would amount, at the most conservative estimate, to 10 cents on the bushel.

Experienced and successful farmers say that the opening price, as a rule, is generally the best. Of course there are exceptional years. And they should not forget that in 1913 the United States raised the largest crop of the country, and Christian county's crop does not amount to a drop in the bucket.

HALL INDICTED

Webster County Man Charged With Night Riding.

Henderson, Ky., July 11.—Two indictments, one charging night riding and the other arson, were brought against Claude Hall, confined in the Dixon jail, by the grand jury, in session at Dixon today.

He denies being a member of any gang, and says that he has taken no oaths. He says he sent the notes on account of some trouble between him and Spencer over the purchase of a cow.

Hall is the first man arrested in this section on a charge of night riding, after hundreds of plant beds have been destroyed.

Of Whitney Shows Not Given, As Diver is Ill.

No one regrets the nonappearance here of the 90-foot diver, Capt. J. F. Colston, more than manager Whitney, of the Carnival aggregation, which opened up here Monday night for a week's engagement. The shows came here under the auspices of the Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias. The cause of the diver not coming is the illness of Capt. Colston, who was taken down with malarial fever and was forced to go to his home at St. Louis. The information came from a physician at Bowling Green, who attended Capt. Colston before he left for St. Louis.

Two Negroes are Principals in Tragedy in San Domingo Wednesday.

GEORGE MURRELL THE VICTIM

Layne, the Slayer, Claims That Weapon Was Discharged Accidentally.

Wednesday afternoon in "San Domingo" George Murray received his death wound from a ball from Saint Layne's pistol. Both parties were colored and the cause of the shooting is said to date back something like a year ago, when the negroes had a fall-out.

Murray lived about six hours after being shot and before his death made a statement that may go hard for Layne when he is tried at the September circuit court. Layne, after his arrest by Deputy Sheriffs Chilton and Johnson and Lieut. Hawkins, said that the shooting was accidental, and this will doubtless be his plea when arraigned for trial.

He admits that each of them had a pistol and says they were going to compare them, and when he drew his pistol across the counter in the store it hung on a nail and went off. The dead negro's testimony was that when he looked up Layne had his gun pointed at him. The bullet took effect in Murray's right side and stopped in his left side. Murray died 10 o'clock Wednesday night.

CITY SUED

To Make Good An Order On Illinois Central Railroad Co.

The suit against the city by the Meacham Contracting Co., set aside on a technicality at the last court, has been started anew. The summons in the first case was not served on the Mayor, who was absent from the state. The plaintiff sues to enforce the payment of $1,425 and interest one year on its contract with the city for the construction of the Tenth street sewer. An assessment against the I. C. railroad for a part of the cost was tendered in payment, which the railroad company has refused to pay. The claim of the plaintiff is that it had no contract with the railroad, but looks to the city to force the railroad company to provide drainage facilities through streets covered by its grant, under penalty of having same revoked. Former Superintendent Egan, of the I. C. Railroad Co., last year agreed to pay $1,200 of the assessment, but this agreement was repudiated by his successor, Supt. Baldwin, and the litigation follows.

R. M. SALMON
ANNOUNCES

Again Asks For The Democratic Nomination For State Senator.

BORN IN CHRISTIAN COUNTY

But He Has Lived The Biggest Part of His Life In Hopkins County.

Senator R. M. Salmon is formally announced in this issue as a candidate for re-election to the State Senate from the district composed of Hopkins and Christian counties.

The Lawrenceburg News in a very complimentary article says of him:

"Rom" Salmon did as much, if not more, to make Ollie James' success for United States Senator than any man in Kentucky. It was this silver-haired Kentucky gentleman who told big brained Ollie to "draw on him when he needed aid." A higher minded or more honorable gentleman or better democrat does not live in the confines of old Kentucky than "Rom" Salmon, as he is affectionately called. A friend to the poor and needy always, he is on the side of the People and the Taxpayers at every crack of the gun. There never was any doubt in the state senate upon any proposition as to how he stood upon any question when the interests of the people were at stake. If that district wants to nominate a man that will reflect honor and credit upon it and the democratic party, it will nominate him by thousands in the primary. A vote for "Rom" Salmon is a vote to reward a faithful and true friend of Senator Ollie James."

Senator Salmon was born in this county but has spent most of his life in Hopkins county, in the mining business at Ilesley. He has been a Democratic committeeman for many years and has always been an active party leader. He never sought office until 1909 when he was elected Senator by an enormous majority, carrying Hopkins by 1100 and Christian by about 500. He is well known in both counties and has a large personal following in this city.

STATE INSPECTOR

Looked Over Western Hospital Last Thursday.

Sherman Goodpaster, State Inspector and Examiner, is making a tour over the State, is looking into the condition of the eleemosynary institutions. He visited the Western Hospital Thursday. Nothing but a favorable report of the hospital is expected, as every day is a clean-up day out there and everything is always as it should be. It is the duty of Mr. Goodpaster to report to Gov. McCreary.

FINED $22.50

In the City Court for Beating Another Man's Wife.

James Irvin, colored, becoming incensed at a colored woman's refusal to take a walk with him, as was shown in the city court Thursday, turned on her and gave her a sound beating. The woman is the wife of Arthur Payne, and her screams reached the ears of someone nearby Wednesday and the Sheriff was called to the scene about 2 o'clock.

The officers failed to find any person about Shipp's Bend, where the trouble occurred, and returned to the city. Thursday morning the man was located and arrested. After hearing the evidence Judge Wood, imposed a fine of $22.50 on Irvin.

BUSINESS MEN
TO GET BUSY

Association Met Thursday Night And Prepared For New Campaign.

CASTLEBERRY HAS RESIGNED.

Results of Year's Work Reviewed and Aroused Enthusiasm.

There is to be no let-up in the work of the Hopkinsville Business Men's Association, but rather new energy and vim is to be put into all departments of work and the new year is to be made greater than ever.

At the meeting of the officers of the Association, held Thursday night, the work of the year was reviewed and what was accomplished is an inspiration to still greater service in the future. An active business men's association is both the regulator and balance-wheel for the successful operation of all departments of a city's activities.

In order to insure the successful carrying out of future plans the Association is going to raise a fund to draw from when spot cash is needed. A number of gentlemen are to get to work and at once raise $5,000 for this purpose, several having already expressed a willingness to plank down their share as starter for securing the amount decided upon.

President R. E. Cooper was empowered by him in order to carry out all plans in the prosecution of his duties. Mr. Cooper is one of the most progressive and successful business men of the city and he will select none but competent men and those who are willing to work for the interests of the city.

Secretary R. L. Castleberry, of the H. B. M. Association, tendered his resignation at the meeting Thursday night, owing to his failing health. Mr. Castleberry has put much energy and intelligent application to duty in the administration of his office and his place will not be easily filled. He will probably leave the city and seek rest in some more congenial climate.

UNIT LAW CONSTRUED

Higher Court Renders Another Important Decision.

The Court of Appeals has rendered another important decision on the unit law in a case from Somerset.

When a local option election is sought in an entire county the petition should be signed by a number of voters equal to 25 per cent. of the votes cast in each of the precincts at the last preceding general election. Persons who sign a petition for a local option election may withdraw their names from the petition before it is acted on by the County Court. Where, on petition for the calling of a local option election the case is submitted, the hearing of evidence on a disputed question of fact renders ineffective the order of submission and does not deprive a petitioner of the right to withdraw his name before it is finally acted on.

James Thompson and D. L. Lewis, two young men, aged about 20, were before the city court Thursday morning on the charge of loitering and were fined $6 each. LEFT FOR CONQUEROR OF ALL

Space Above Flag at Half Mast is Supposed to Be Reserved for Banner of Angel of Death.

Perhaps you have noticed that whenever a prominent person dies, especially if he is connected with the government, the flags on public buildings are hoisted only part of the way up. This is called "half-mast." Did you ever stop to think what connection there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man?

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished.
When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token, not only of submission, but of respect.

In those days, when a famous soldier died, flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half-mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueror of all—the angel of death.

Family Tombstone Lost.
His family tombstone had disappeared from the churchyard, was the remarkable allegation made by a man named Turnbull, a local alderman, at a meeting of the parishioners of Berwick, Scotland, parish church, recently. Turnbull produced a paper certifying that a certain individual, who was present at the meeting, and signified his assent, had carted six loads of broken tombstones to the building of the new parish hall. Alderman Turnbull said he made the discovery about two years ago, but had refrained from mentioning that the tombstone was missing until he had made a careful search.
The allegation that broken tombstones had been taken to build the church hall was denied, in so far that the church wardens knew nothing about it. An inquiry is to be made into the matter.

Objects to One Brand of Humor.
"Many persons, for want of something to do," grimly commented Uncle Timrod Tarry, "are putting in their time trying to think up new and original variations of the asinine expression that so-and-so is the man that put 'flue' in influence or took the 'cent' out of 'incentive,' and so on, ad nauseam. And, as much as I abhor such vile habits, if I caught an individual at it I wouldn't chide or hinder him, for the reason that the kind of a head that would prompt him to indulge in such practices would drive him to wearing side whiskers along with one of these 'ere green hats with the bow in the back, or to arguing that the Progressives will come back into the Grand Old Party, if he was interrupted long enough to cause him to think of something else."—Kansas City Star.

Court Ought to Sit Elsewhere.
"The court, sitting in banc—" began the professor.
"Ar-r-r-r!" snarled old Timrod Tarry. "That's one of the reasons why the people are losing all respect for the courts! What chance in a law suit can a poor but honest man expect to have against greedy capital, when the courts do their settin' in bancs?
And that's the reason, too, why faith in banks ain't what it used to be. Who wants to deposit money where there are a lot of court officials gawpin' at him? Why, blame it, I'll betcha, right now, there are banks that a feller can scarcely scrouge his way into, for the judges and tip-staffs and one thing and another clutter'n' around in the way. What's this country comin' to anyhow?"

Romance Is Not Dead.
You tell me that romance—love at first sight and all that kind of thing—is dead? I tell you it isn't. It's simply out of style, that's all—backed out of the boards by all this fool triangular stuff that the problem plays talk about and that everybody thinks is the proper caper and is afraid to say he or she doesn't like for fear of being called old-fashioned.

Romance is the kind of thing that won't be downed—like truth—and when you mash it in at one place is sticks out at another. If it has been cultivated out of the favored social classes, here's hoping the down-wood masses are getting theirs—and I believe they are.—Hattie Lee MacAlister, in the American Magazine.

Miser's Revenge.
An old miser, who died in Wales recently, fell out with his relatives over a trifle several years ago, and he thereupon changed nearly all his money into banknotes. Each bank-note he tore into two, burning one portion and retaining the other. When his relatives came to examine his effects after his death they found to their chagrin, valueless halves of the banknotes and a letter which contained the paragraph:
"All my money I leave to my dear relatives to be equally divided between them. I am sure they will not quarrel about it."

The miser had destroyed the halves of the banknotes bearing the numbers Newfoundland's Petroleum.
Newfoundland is now regarded as one of the most promising future sources of supply of petroleum within the British empire. There are oil indications for 200 miles along the west coast.

OUR $5,000,000 COCKROACH

Colon, C. Z.—If you wish to hear "language," just say "Cucaracha" to one of the engineers engaged in building the central division of the Panama canal.

Cucaracha in Spanish means a cockroach. In the Canal Zone it means the greatest of the numerous slides that have made the completion of the Culebra cut so different and so expensive. Why that slide was named the cockroach I could not discover.
Certainly even the Panamanian cockroach is not so large, and he moves much more swiftly.

Before the first French company quit operations in 1889 the Cucaracha began to slide, and it first gave the Americans trouble in 1905, the second year of their work on the canal. Between then and July 1, 1912, nearly 3,000,000 cubic yards of material was removed from the canal because of it. The slide had broken nearly 1,900 feet from the axis of the canal, and covered an area of 47 acres. Last fall the engineers were congratulating themselves on having the cockroach stopped, but in January it started moving again, and nearly covered the bottom of the cut.

"What is going to be the cost of that slide to the United States?" I asked Colonel Goethals as we stood at the edge of the Culebra cut and looked across the chasm to where the steam shovels and hundreds of men were laboring to remove the vast mass of earth and rock.

"Well," the chief engineer replied, "our estimate is that by the time it is all cleared up it will have required the expenditure of about $5,000,000 more than the cut would have cost if the slide had not occurred. It is still moving, and has broken so far back that

Giant Steam Shovel.

now we are shoveling the crest away from the canal in order to relieve the pressure from above. Before the movement in January began the excavation in the cut at that point had been carried to within 15 feet of the canal bottom. Digging out that 15 feet of material removed the support of the Cucaracha, and down it came. If we could have turned in the water and taken out the 15 feet with dredges, I think the pressure of the water would have done much to prevent the slide."

"What of the future?" I asked. "Is there any danger of slides occurring after the canal is opened?"

"Absolutely none, I believe," he answered. "When the excavating and dynamiting have ceased and the water is in, it will be quite safe. We have the slides and breaks mapped out as far back as there is any indication of their extending, and are working back to those lines. It is merely a matter of persistency and patience."

"When will the water be let into the cut?"

In October," replied Colonel Goethals.
"But there will be no celebration over the event. That one in January, 1915, is giving us enough worry, and we don't forget the premature and ridiculous celebration by Ferdinand de Lesseps many years ago. We will just turn the water in—that's all. Then we can complete the excavation there with suction dredges, which will do the work cheaply and rapidly."

"And when will boats be passing through the canal?"

"That I cannot say, but the sooner the better, for the operating crews must be properly trained before that January celebration. I wouldn't have an accident occur for anything. If we cannot have commercial vessels going through before then, I shall ask the government to send naval vessels through, so the operating forces can get the experience. Anyhow, I want to see the canal opened to commerce as soon as possible, for it is revenue I am after."

Another day I stood with Col. D. D.
Gaillard, the engineer of the central division, outside his office in Empire, and watched his army laboring in the cut, the completion of which has been his biggest task and greatest glory. Right at our feet a big area had sunk down 70 feet in a night, and if there had not been warnings of the break a wing of the colonel's office building would have gone down with it. "We had just time to remove that wing," said he, "and my office force is rather nervous now, for there are three big cracks under the main building. I expect it, too, will have to be torn down very soon."

"These slides used to make us rather depondent, for it seemed as if they never would stop, but the progress we are making this year has cheered up the operating forces again, and we can see the end of the task. The slide and the break are quite different. In the former the earth slides at an angle down a sloping face of rock, and in the latter the mass sinks straight down and at the bottom bulges out into the channel. Along both sides of the cut you can see numerous small slides and breaks. Those are in pockets in the rock wall, and, annoying as they are, they only need cleaning out. The Cucaracha started as a slide and now it is both a slide and a break."

"Incidentally, that cut should be a great place for geologists. I have found in it every kind of rock except granite, and many interesting fossils and petrifications have been discovered there. In one stratum through which we cut there were found a great number of teeth of prehistoric varieties of sharks."

"What is your opinion concerning the date when the canal will be ready for commerce?" I asked.

"If I had my say," said the colonel emphatically, "not a commercial vessel would be allowed in the canal until it is absolutely complete down to the smallest detail. In some of the many safety devices were not in operation and an accident should result, the canal would get a black eye from which it might not recover for a long time. Officially, the time for the completion of the canal is still January 1, 1915. It may be done before that date, but in March of this year there was still about $5,000,000 worth of work ahead of us."

"We who have been digging the canal and are still here in positions of responsibility—I mean the members of the Isthmian canal commission—are rather fearful concerning that part of the Adamson bill which permits the president to dissolve the commission whenever in his judgment the canal is near enough to completion.
We feel that it would be extremely unjust not to allow us to remain 'on the job' until after the grand formal opening in January, 1915. It would be much like permitting a boy to complete his university course, and then taking him home before he receives his diploma."

And then Colonel Gaillard said some things about Mr. Taft's efforts to put into effect that clause last January, which must have made the ex-president's ears tingle a bit.

"The Culebra cut is like a three-ring circus. I don't know which way to look," said one visitor to the zone.

It is indeed a scene of wonderful activity. Giant steam shovels are scattered through it, scooping up enormous masses of rock and earth; on half a dozen tracks on as many different levels snorting and puffing locomotives are swiftly drawing loaded or empty dirt trains; along the ledges are batteries of steam and compressed air drills, making holes for dynamite; suddenly there is a toottooting of a steam whistle, a hundred men scurry to shelter, and a dynamite blast fills the air with sound and dirt and rocks.

Watching the steam shovels is a favorite occupation of visitors who venture down into the Culebra cut. They seem almost human, and do a vast amount of work. Their dippers hold five cubic yards of material, weighing on an average a little more than three tons. This spoil is emptied into cars of several kinds. Flat cars with one high side are unloaded by plops that are drawn the length of the train by cables upon a winding drum. The others are dump cars, the largest of which are operated by compressed air from the locomotive. The trains haul the spoil from the cut to dumping grounds, which are at an average about 12 miles distant. Some 18,000-000 cubic yards of this material was used as filling for the long breakwater at the Pacific entrance.

ORDINARY MEN AND WOMEN

Some Few Things That Perhaps All People Have Not Had Time to

The man who boasts to his wife that he has never deceived her usually doesn't, even then.
Various observers have expressed the fear that in certain sections of Manhattan the pet dog has already usurped the place the child should have in feminine affections.

Perhaps. But we have never seen a healthy child after taking childhood's candid, appraising look at one of these women, clamor for an exchange of destinies.

Oh, the many noble women who are faithfully and consistently atoning by their lives for the deceptions they practiced in order to catch their husbands!

If we admit that woman is the guardian of religion, in all ages, we begin to get a hint of the reason why the devil, in most theological systems, figures as a man.

It is a mistake to suppose that all the cynical reflections upon married men are written by married men.
Some are written by married women.

The "inconstancy of women"— that is the most convenient phrase ever invented by man, for it condones in advance all his contemplated infidelities.

NOT AT ALL UNREASONABLE

Wife Determined to Have Something for Her Share in Sale, but Amount Was by No Means Excessive.

An aged couple recently sold for three thousand pounds the farm whereon they had lived for many years. In due course the purchaser called with a solicitor to close up the sale. The solicitor had prepared a deed, which the farmer signed and passed to his wife, whose signature also was necessary.

To the surprise of everyone, the woman declined to put her name to the instrument.

"I have lived on this farm for over thirty years," she said, "and I am not going to sign away my rights unless I get something out of it that I can call my own."

The husband and the solicitor reasoned with her, but to no avail. She was immovable. The purchaser evinced signs of nervousness, since he felt that the woman's demands might be unreasonable.

Finally, after further parley, he stepped himself to put the momentous question:

"How much will you take to sign the deed?"

The woman hesitated, and then finally she replied:

"Well, I think I ought to have half a sovereign, anyway."—London Tit-Bits.

OBLIGING.

"By Jove," exclaimed the householder, who had come downstairs to investigate a strange noise, "a real burglar! Just wait a minute, will you?"

"While you call a cop?" said the burglar sarcastically. "Well, I don't think."

"No," said the householder earnestly, "only while I call my wife.
She'll be glad to see you, for she's heard you every night for twenty years."

BED DIVIDED AGAINST ITSELF.

Tom—Mother, Jack's got half the bed.

Mother—Well, you take the other half.

Tom—I can't; he's got his half in the middle.—Woman's Home Companion.

HIS LIMIT.

"Am I the only girl you have ever loved?"

"Not exactly. But I will say that you're the only girl I've ever been willing to pay taxicab hire for."— Detroit Free Press.

THE REASON.

"Why do the wits propose a bargain sale on election day where women vote?"

"Probably as a counter demonstration."

NONE THERE TO READ.

"I feel afraid of that woman.
They say she is a mind reader."

"Well, she won't bother you."

HEREDITY.

"What a little shaver!"
"Yes, he's the barber's boy."

Break Step!

Keep step! I have had many letters correcting that phase about the sedan chairs. What you must do is to "break step," and the stretcher bearers who follow the wounded are taught it. If you carry a stretcher, two of you, and walk in step, you will find it swinging and throwing the patient. If you walk in step with a regiment across a bridge you may break it down with the swing. That is why the band always ceases when the regiment crosses the bridge.—London

A Strange Story.

Argyle, Mich.—Mrs. Wm. H. Carson, in a letter from Argyle, says:
"I was almost wild with pain in my head, and other severe pains, due to womanly troubles. Cardui gave me great relief at once. Further use of Cardui raised me from my bed of agony. Cardui saved my life, and I can't be thankful enough for what it did for me." Whether seriously sick, or simply ailing, take Cardui, the woman's tonic. As a general tonic for woman, to improve the appetite and build up the constitution, Cardui is in a class by itself.
Those who have used it say it does the work; it relieves, it cures. Try

No Profit in Alligators.

The difficulty about raising alligators to supply the demand for the animals and skins is that they do not attain full growth for about 100 years.
The skin of the six or seven-year-old animal is available, however, for many practical purposes. There is one on a farm at Palm Beach which measures 18 feet in length and is said to be about 90 years old. There are several of these farms in operation at the present time, but the industry will not be really profitable until the wild alligators become scarcer.

THREE THINGS YOU NEED...

First—"Kentuckian"
A vital, newsy newspaper with the interest of the entire community at heart. Issues of the day are handled without fear or favor. You will find in this paper an up-to-date department for each member of the family. Clean, honest, straightforward—it is a paper your family should not be without.

Second—Technical World Magazine

It is profusely illustrated, and tells in an interesting way of the discoveries of scientists, the achievements of inventors, the progress of engineering and explorers, and the opening of every new field of human endeavor. Book London says: "I have just chanced upon my first copy of TECHNICAL WORLD. There isn't anything like it. I want more, and I cannot wait for them sending you beneath check for which please enter my subscription and send me immediately the last two years' back numbers."

Third—A Fine Atlas
This one is just off the presses. This is the year to obtain a new atlas. The 1910 Census has just been completed, this atlas contains the official figures, 123 pages of 3 color maps brought right down to date—every map giving the results of the most recent surveys. All railroads are shown and named and maps of all large cities are included. There are 24 double page maps showing in detail portions of the U. S. and Canada. Dimensions 10 1/2 x 13 1/2. Bound in stiff brown—Silver Leaf Title—printed on heavy plate paper. Sells regularly for $3.80. A splendid gift.

HOLDS COURT FOR FOURTEEN HOURS DAILY

What do you think of a judge who holds court from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m. day in and day out with just twenty minutes for luncheon, and who sends fewer persons to jail than any other judge on the bench.

Well, that describes Judge Joseph C. Uhler of the court of domestic relations, in Chicago, who declared in an interview the other day that the judge must be the father of the people as well as their judge.

In Judge Uhler's court seventy to eighty cases of domestic infelicity are dealt with in one way or another every day in the week. To take care of the enormous mass of trouble, the judge rises at 6:30 daily and seldom goes to bed before 1 a. m. Speaking practically all the languages and dialects of southern Europe, Judge Uhler talks directly from the bench with wives and husbands who have quarreled, with children who have sinned, to officials who have erred.

Here is Judge Uhler's judicial philosophy:

The errant husband may be chided into decency.

The wasteful wife may be talked into thrift.

The delinquent child may be saved by kindness.

Divorce should be the last resort of the unhappily married.

False standards of living should be denounced from the bench.

The persistent evil-doer should be swiftly and severely punished.

The judge on the bench should be a father to his petitioners.

"The position of domestic court judge is no sinecure, but it is intensely interesting and profitable. It is the court of all the people," said Judge Uhler.

"I consider it a complete vindication of the new court that we are able to reunite at least one-half of the husbands and wives who come here seeking divorce or separation. This is accomplished by reasoning with the people instead of applying the strict rules of legal procedure."

"The lazy man is brought here. He refuses to work. He insists he cannot get work. Now, the arguments placed before this man are few but convincing. He generally goes to work and if he doesn't he goes to the bridewell."

"This brings me to an idea I have that we should establish big farms where all lazy men, wife deserters, all men who neglect their responsibilities and refuse to heed the admonitions of the court, may be compelled to work and their wages go to the families they neglect when they are free."

"When a wife needs a scolding I don't mince words with her. I tell her just where she gets off, to use a colloquialism, and often she goes home in tears to be a better woman."

"Oh, there is no doubt that the court of domestic relations is a permanent institution and that the principle upon which it is conducted will become general within a few years."

ONLY WOMAN BOSS OF A BIG BASEBALL TEAM

Sundry enthusiastic and emotional citizens of the Mound City who make a practice of attending baseball games may observe during the amenities between a visiting club and the St. Louis Nationals a little woman sitting in the distinguished region just behind the center of localized hostilities, or, to put it more colloquially, in line with the plate.

It will be observed that she sits only an infinitesimal portion of the time. Good or bad plays bring her swiftly to her feet, and if they operate to the advantage of the St. Louis team provoke shrill and unmistakable expressions of approval. It is evident that she is filled with extraordinary interest. Moreover, she knows the game.

This little woman is Mrs. Helen Hathaway Robison Britton, owner of the St. Louis team, sometimes known as the Cardinals.

Mrs. Britton is not a suffragette. If she has added one more to the ever increasing number of feminine invasions upon the whilom domain of man it is through accident rather than design. She does think that a woman can run a baseball team with masculine facility. Whether this is true remains to be seen. The Cardinals never have been particularly distinguished for pennant winning proclivities. If in this, their second year of feminine ownership, they succeed in landing anywhere near the first division, the average fan will be inclined to consider Mrs. Britton a success.

Mrs. Britton inherited the Cardinals. They belonged originally to her father, Frank De Haas Robison, who was also the one-time proprietor of the Cleveland Spiders. On his death the Cardinals passed into the hands of his brother, Stanley Robison. The latter's death in 1911 threw the team into the ownership of Mrs. Britton. She was left 997 of the 1,000 shares—an inheritance, considering the popularity of baseball in St. Louis, amounting to a good deal more than a million dollars.

Mrs. Britton knows baseball from top to bottom, and she is not afraid to express her opinions when the occasion calls for it. True, she does not express them so graphically as an unhampered male, but she puts it plain enough for their tenor to reach second base. (Musicians, kindly take note.) She is only a little more than five feet tall, but when she rises to make a remark it carries. And it is always straight to the point. Mrs. Britton says:

"As for the Cardinals, the happiest day of my life will be when they bring home a pennant. Perhaps that won't be this year, but it is going to happen some day. That will be the best answer to the question of whether a woman can be a good baseball proprietor."

VASSAR GIRL, SWEET 16, WINS COVETED "V"

At sixteen, to wear a rose colored "V" upon one's sweater!

That is something in the college girls' world.

It means that Vassar college has a new idol, an idol who is five feet eight and one-half inches in height and possessed of clear brown eyes, a bright, healthy complexion and thick brown hair, which was long enough to sit on when she wore it in "pig tails" in her "prep" school days.

But it isn't any of these qualities that have won Miss Elizabeth Abigail Hardin the devotion of her college mates. Infinitely more important than these is the rose colored "V" which has fallen to her for making a college record, on May 4, at the field day meet, when she put the shot thirty-two feet and three-fourths inch, distancing the old record, made in 1909, of 31 feet 9 1/4 inches. Miss Hardin is the first girl to have established such a record in her freshman year, and in addition to her shot putting prowess she broke two intercollegiate records at the same field day meet. She threw the baseball 205 feet and 7 inches, as against the old mark, made by Miss Dorothy Smith, of the class of 1914, of 204 feet and 5 inches. The other new record established by Miss Hardin was a basketball throw of 80 feet and 1 1/4 inches, distancing the record held by Miss Milholland, 1909, of 77 feet 9 1/4 inches.

Miss Hardin is the daughter of Mr. John R. Hardin, a lawyer, of Newark, N. J. All her girlish life has been passed in Newark and before entering Vassar her education had been obtained entirely at the Townsend school.

PRINCESS INDISA FLEES HER NATIVE INDIA

Princess Indisa, the beautiful daughter of the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda, whose sensational flight from Calcutta on the eve of her marriage to Prince Jitendra of Cocho Behra, threw India society into an uproar, is visiting in France with her parents.

Reasons advanced for her action are that a strange mingling of the advanced ideals of English and American women with the ancient traditions of India have made her entirely a "new woman."

Betrothals among the reigning families of India are seldom broken, but it has been said that the princess confided her secret to friends that she believed the prince to be of an inferior caste.

The maharaja of Baroda, her mother, has very decided views on caste and the evolution of the latter day Indian woman from the customs of their ancestors.

The Gaekwar of Baroda rules over 8,000 miles of territory and has 2,000,000 subjects. He is one of the wealthiest men in India and is highly educated.

Statements have followed statements since the episode. One version is that the prince made a formal proposal for the princess, but that her parents would not give their consent.

The prince, it is said, then caused preparations for the marriage to continue.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

POLITICAL NOTICE.

To the Democrats of the Sixth Senatorial District:
I take this method of announcing my candidacy for the Democratic nomination for re-election for State Senator of this senatorial district, composed of Hopkins and Christian.
As you know, I have served you in this capacity for one term and during two sittings of the legislature in which I had the honor to represent you. I at all times supported such measures as I thought would be for the best interest of the people, not only of this district, but for the people of Kentucky as well. Upon that record I stand and to which I invite your careful consideration.

I feel highly honored by having the full membership of the Democratic Executive Committee of Hopkins county a few weeks hence, to call upon me in person to make this race, and am grateful to each of them for the confidence reposed in me.

It has been the impression among a great many democrats of this district that it has been the custom of the two counties in the past to alternate their democratic nominees for State Senator. But such has not been the case. Out of the last six democratic nominees for State Senator, Christian county has had four, and Hopkins county has had only two. Christian had the nominees in 1891, 1893, 1897 and 1905, while Hopkins county had the two in 1901 and 1909. So if I am nominated this time, Hopkins county will then have had only three out of seven of the senatorial nominees. Good feeling has always existed among the democrats in the two counties, does now and I want to see this good feeling continue. However, I believe a great majority of the democracy of Christian county will agree with me that it is only fair and right for Hopkins county to have the senator this time and many of them have so expressed themselves.

As everyone knows, this district is very close if not normally republican.
I can say with pardonable pride that I believe I could be of some assistance to the democratic nominees of both counties in the general election in November, in the event of my nomination. Four years ago when I was your nominee, I carried Hopkins county in the November election by over 1100 majority, being the large-est majority ever given a candidate for office in her history. and Christian by about 500, and I received more votes than any other nominee ever received for state senator in this district.

I have been a member of the democratic executive committee of Hopkins county for many years, having served longer in that capacity perhaps than any one in the county, have always given freely of my time and means for the success of the democratic party and her nominees.
If re-elected to this honorable and responsible trust, I pledge my honest and earnest service and devotion to the people's interest in all matters of legislation.

I shall make a vigilant and clean canvass, and will be grateful for the votes and influence of all good democrats throughout the district, and if nominated, will do all in my power for the entire democratic ticket for both counties in November.

Very respectfully,
R. M. SALMON.

Certificates Not Needed.

Answering an inquiry propound-ed by the County Clerk of Christian county, Assistant Attorney General Charles H. Morris holds that it will not be necessary for voters at the August primary to show their registration certificates in order to vote.
Quoting the section of the primary law Gen. Morris says that it is clearly the intention of the primary law that the election officers determine who has the right to vote from the last general registration books, which the County Clerk is required to turn-ish at each precinct where registration is required.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the time of a Weekly.

No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

This is a time of great events and you will want the news accurate and promptly. The Democrats, for the first time in sixteen years, will have the Presidency and they will also control both branches of Congress. The political news is sure to be of the most absorbing interest.

There is a great war in the Old World, and you may read of the extinction of the vast Turkish Empire. In Europe, just as a few years ago you read how Spain lost her last foot of soil in America, after having ruled the empire of half the New World.

The World long since established a record for impartiality, and anybody can afford its Thrice-a-Week edition, which comes every other day in the week, except Sunday. It will be of particular value to you now. The Thrice-a-Week World abounds in other strong features, serial stories, humor, markets, cartoons; in fact, everything that is to be found in a first class daily.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and the Hopkinsville Kentuckian together for one year for $2.65.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3.00.

WAS TRUE TO HIM

Convict's Mountain Sweetheart Clung to Him Through All His Troubles.

By GEORGE A. BAFFIN.

He crouched in the undergrowth, cautiously parting the bushes with one hand to peer out down the mountain side. He was a ragged giant of a man, clean-limbed, yet with a strange pallor upon his face. Upon each wrist, too, were half-healed scars. These had been caused by the heroic efforts which he had used to free himself from his manacles. But he was free at last. He had escaped from the state penitentiary three weeks before and his pursuers had never been able to discover his secret hiding place upon Bear mountain.

He had heard them seeking for him eternally; on the very day after his escape he had come upon one of the guards dozing under a fir tree. He had taken his rifle and then, awakening him, scornfully ordered him to depart. The man had obeyed fearfully, and the rifle and a box of matches had enabled the fugitive to live. But every time he brought down a rabbit or partridge the sound of the shot, echoing through the valleys, at once informed his pursuers of his whereabouts.

He looked round cautiously. No one was in sight. High up on the opposite hill he saw the outlines of a tiny cabin. It was his sweetheart's home—Mollie Stark's. It was to avenge an insult to her that he had shot and crippled Seth Baldwin. That was two years before, and he had been sent up for ten. Mollie had sworn to be true to him.

But since his flight he had not dared go near her home. It was too desperate a chance to take. But a visit on his part to the wild glen in which they had plighted their troth had resulted in the finding of a package of food placed there by Mollie. In it was a little note.

"Dere Ben," it ran. "I hid this and brou't it here thinking you would come here. Come to the cabin on Monday nite at nine. Lovingly, Mollie."

The full moon gave almost as much light as the sun. The fugitive crawled down the slope and approached the opposite height, worming his way up through the ferns and close-clinging vines. At last he emerged upon a little rocky eminence a hundred yards distant from the cabin. From Mollie's window a rag fluttered. The fugitive understood that sign. She was alone. Grasping his rifle he went forward boldly.

He was within ten yards when the door opened. His heart leaped. Mollie stood in the doorway, her arms outstretched, to welcome him. Behind her was the flickering candle. But as he drew near, suddenly a sight froze his blood. The shadow of a man had passed the candle; another, and another. He halted in his tracks. Behind Mollie he saw a rifle barrel.

With an oath he flung back into the brushwood. He would have fired, but, treacherous though she was, he could not bring himself to kill her. He heard yells behind him, Mollie's screams, the shouts of his pursuers. If they had fired before he won the woods they might have brought him down as he had brought down that rabbit the afternoon before. But, oddly enough, they forebore, and with a shout of defiance he gained the forest path and was speeding like a stag toward Bear mountain.

An hour later he dropped exhausted upon the ground inside his cave. It was a bear's hole, cunningly hidden on the mountain side. Among that waste of burned-over pine stumps none could hit upon it save by accident, and that he did not anticipate. It was not fear that made him pant like a marathon runner, but wrath and self-contempt.

Mollie was a waitress! He had been fooled by a chit of a girl, for whose sake he had suffered two years in the penitentiary. Anger overcame all other feelings. He would show her! He would show them! What should he do?

For an hour he lay thinking, gnawing his lip in rage. His passion for her had been so strong, his love so large a part of his existence, that the revulsion was terrible. He must contrive some punishment commensurate with the crime. Among the hill women there could be none other so base as to betray her lover, as Mollie had sought to betray him. He had recognized one of the men in the parlor as Frank Merriman, the sheriff. He had been a suitor for Mollie's hand before she promised herself to Ben. Doubtless he had persuaded her.

Ha! He had his plan. It flashed into his brain ready-formed in the furnace of his wrath. Doubtless Merriman would be at her home the following night. Her father, the bedridden old man, would be helpless. He would steal in and shoot the man before Mollie's eyes—and then—then—cut off her hair, leaving her to the derision of the hill folk.

His plan consumed him. He passed the outstanding hours like a man in a delirium. Day dawned, the sun blazed upon the wild-eyed man who paced to and fro upon the mountain side. The shadows lengthened as the sun declined; at last the fiery orb touched the horizon. Shouldering his rifle he marched doggedly through the scrub until once more he saw Mollie's cabin outlined against the darkening sky upon the further ridge. Even as he watched a tiny spark flashed out from the parlor candle.

An hour later he was lying upon his stomach outside the cabin. Inside he saw Frank Merriman, smoking in one corner. Mollie was laying the supper table. Occasionally she stopped before the sheriff and seemed to plead with him. Ben gritted his teeth.

If only Merriman would lay aside his rifle. But he kept his clasp of it even at the supper table; it was only later when he arose that he placed it for a moment against the mud wall. The watcher knew that his time had come. Mollie's hands were on Merriman's arm and she was pleading very earnestly. Ben fancied that she was crying.

He sprang to his feet and rushed through the open door. He saw indistinctly; the world was revolving in a fiery mist, through his weapon. Next moment, too enraged to fire, Ben had dropped his rifle and his hands were on the sheriff's throat.

To and fro they wrestled. The table was knocked down. The clumsy chairs went spinning across the room. The candle was dashed to the floor, and in the bewildering night each only knew that he was fighting for life with an implacable adversary. Ben dug his knuckles into the hollow space between the point of the jaw and the great cord behind the ear—an old woodsman's trick, to compress the carotid and produce unconsciousness. He felt his enemy weakening. He had him at his mercy now. Suddenly a tremendous blow fell upon his head from behind. He heard the shivering of the cheap rifle stock, flung out his hands, felt for some stable hold in the encompassing darkness, and tumbled to the ground. The last thing that he saw as his senses left him was the faint glimmer of the relict candle and Mollie's agonized face, in its aureole hair.

"Ben!"

"Mollie!"

He started out through the whirling phantasmagoria that surrounded him. He was dizzy and deathly sick. Gradually, as the fog cleared from his brain, he realized that he was lying in a little room. He lay in Mollie's room, upon a bed, and the face that he loved best in all the world was bending over him.

"Thank God he is coming to, Frank!"

"You had better leave him for the present." It was the voice of Merriman. He came into the circle of Ben's vision, a mighty man, his face swathed in bandages. Looking upon him, Ben dimly wondered how he had ever had the strength to wrestle with such a fellow. He was too weak to lift a finger now.

"Well, young fellow!" Merriman was scowling down at him. "You've done for yourself pretty well now," he continued. "If my nephew, Walt, hadn't had the gumption to come up at the right moment and snatch my rifle you'd have had a murder charge against you. I thought you were gone when I saw the whack he gave you that night."

"That night! When?"

"Two weeks ago tomorrow. Yep, I reckon you've kind of lost count of time," he continued, smiling less evilly. "You've been mighty near death, young fellow, let me tell you."

"Well, I guess you've won," said Ben feebly. "When are you going to take me back to the penitentiary?"

Frank Merriman scratched his head, then, fingering his bandages, he scowled; at length a smile broke out upon his face.

"When will you be ready to start?" he asked.

"You'd have to put me in a cart, I reckon," answered Ben. "Frank," he continued, "I'm likely to get a life sentence now and we aren't likely to meet again. I want to ask a promise of you. Treat Mollie well. She's the finest girl in the world, and if she was false to me—well, I reckon it was for your sake, Frank."

The sheriff stared at him. Then he turned abruptly away. "The devil—you—say!" he muttered.

He went to the door and called the girl. Ben heard them whispering outside. And presently he was aware, in his weakness, that Mollie was bending over him again.

"Ben!"

"Mollie!"

"Ben, dearest. Did you think I had betrayed you, Ben? Did you dare to think that I was untrue to you?"

He felt her tears drop on his hand. He listened dumbly, in an agony of anticipation and doubts he dared not utter.

"Listen, Ben! You are free. Free to go where you will. When you escaped the newspapers took up your case. They demanded that you should be set free. The governor was appealed to. He said that you had been punished enough. Your pardon arrived the week before you first came to the cabin. That was why I went to the mountain. I should have told you, but I wanted it to come as a surprise. That night Mr. Merriman was waiting here to hand it to you. You are free, Ben, free to go where you will—free to—free to marry me—if you want to!"

Allaying the Panic.

An old gentleman with several suspicious red spots on his face entered a railway car recently and quietly took the only seat that was vacant.

An inquisitive young fellow asked him if he had had smallpox, and he replied, "Yes." There was a general scramble among the passengers, all of whom wanted to get out at once, and in about a minute the old gentleman had the car all to himself.

The conductor, cautiously peeping in, demanded how long it was since the afflicted individual had recovered.

"Well, sir," replied the victim of disease, "I can't say exactly, but as near as I can recollect it was about thirty-five years ago."

SPECIAL TO WOMEN

Do you realize the fact that thousands of women are now using

Paxtine
A Soluble Antiseptic Powder

as a remedy for mucous membrane affections, such as sore throat, nasal or pelvic catarrh, inflammation or ulceration, caused by female ills? Women who have been cured say "It is worth its weight in gold." Dissolve in water and apply locally. For ten years the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. has recommended Paxtine in their private correspondence with women.

For all hygienic and toilet uses it has Worth Weight in Gold.

Abingdom, Va.—Mrs. Jennie Mc-Call, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with female complaints, for over ten years. I could not walk or stand on my feet, and had been almost confined to the house, for a long time. I began to take Cardui, the woman's tonic, and now I can walk anywhere I want to go. Cardui is worth its weight in gold." This is a high estimate on a plain, herb medicine, yet there are thousands of women who would gladly pay this price for a remedy to relieve their suffering. Cardui has helped others. Why not you? Try it. Your druggist tells it, in $1 bottles.

NEED NOT BE TOO ABRUPT

Valuable Thing for a Man to Acquire Is the Ability to Say "No" in a Pleasant Manner.

Many a man in private affairs or in public office creates needless complications because he is unwilling or unable to return the soothing, diplomatic answer that turneth away wrath, and to decline a request with a certain unctuous graciousness that almost robs it of the sense of nega-tion.

Often it is not the "no" that baffles opportunity resents—it is the way the "no" is uttered. The flat refusal is somehow made to sound as though its peremptoriness left in the hard, cold, cruel mind of the refuser no lingering regret. The astute, tactful, clever person knows how to temper the wind to the one whose plea must be rejected. There is a blending of kindness and firmness that pours oil on troubled waters. Resentment is disarmed and opposition lulled to rest by the placating syllables of the terms in which the refusal is couched.

Many strong, resolute characters utterly repudiate such conciliatory tactics as weak and effeminate. They believe in "blurring it right out" when they have reached an inflexible decision; in saying what they think, in striking from the shoulder, in being positive, forthright and blunt. It sounds Napoleonic, heroic, masterful, but, as a matter of fact, these persons of Homeric or Saxon outspokenness often have to lean upon the services of others, in affairs that require any delicacy or conciliatory courtesy. The man of uncompromising and rigid austerity is admirable, but sometimes he makes virtue odious; he does nothing immoral if he discloses human sympathies and a generous willingness to consider an opposing point of view before its final refutation at his hands.

QUEER DUCK

"Whitley's a queer duck."
"Yes?"
"He says he enjoys February above all the months, because he is paid by the month and feels then that he is beating the game."

SMARTNESS.

Baker—Isn't it funny how crooks are always smarter than honest people?

Hawker—It is reasonable. If honest people were smarter, they would all be crooks.—Judge.

CONTRARIWISE.

"There is one very queer, yet usual result of a freeze-out by one party."

"What is that?"

"A roast by the other."

LOOKS IT.

"I hear your son is a diplomaniac."

"You're mistaken; he's a Cubist"

"Pretty much the same thing."

LITERAL.

"Bill is making money hand over fist."

"How is he doing it?"

"Giving demonstrations in rope-climbing at a gymnasium."

NOT ON THE STAGE.

Church—Did you ever see "The Forty Thieves?"

Gotham—Why, yes; I guess I've seen that many taxicab drivers.

HE KNEW SMITHERS.

"I understand SmITHERS has a bad case of broken spirits."

"Then it must have come from brandy smashes."

CORRECTED.

"This plant is a perennial, I believe."

"No, it ain't its a pink."

Bob Taylor Lives,
In the two bright and beautiful books just issued, "Lectures and Best Literary Productions," and "Life and Career" of Senator Robert Love Taylor, handsomely illustrated, you cannot hear again his voice or see the humorous curl of his lips, that convulsed a continent with laughter, but, within the covers of these volumes, are the pictures woven of his wondrous words, and, laughing through their sunny pages, are all of the inimitable stories which he told to the multitudes. In "Life and Career," pens of genius have traced his romantic life from its morning in "Happy Valley," through his young and roseate dreams through stress and storm, through cheering throngs, and on into the waiting shadows, loved and laurel crowned.

We expect to sell millions of these books. First edition going fast.
